"THEM'S MINE."

Was Lunch Stand Suspended

[Eureka Sentinol.]

Cure friend Joe Nelson, who has re-cently received the appointment of Un-der Sheriff, is a genial gentleman, and by all odds the best story-teller in the State. We have known Joe for a good many years, and in all his wanderings, whether as a drug clerk in New York, a bearded miner in South Africa, a hotel clerk in Virginia City, or a seleon-keeper bearded miner in South Africa, a hotel clerk in Virginia City, or a saloon-keeper on Park's Bar in '49, he was always the same jovial, good fellow. In early times in California Joe was running a popular saloon on Park's Bar, and Kettle-Belly Brown, famous in the annals of the Comstock, and the original of Mark Twain's Scotty Briggs, was also a denizen of that locality. Business was lively for the placers were rich, and K. B. thought he saw a chance for a speculation, and applied to Joe for a corner in the saloon to establish an oyster stand, which privilege was granted. K. B. which privilege was granted. K. B. entered into partnership with one Smith.

Of one brass kettle and stove, two dozen soup-plates, knives, forks, etc., and a counter improvised from a plank and two barrels. All the canned oysters were barrels. All the canned oysters were bought up, and, when served up, retailed at a dollar a plats. "There was millions in it," and K. B. ladled out the stews with much satisfaction beaming from his florid countenance, but with a canker eating at his heart, and his partner was the cause of it. Poor Smith, like all great men, had a weakness, and gentle woman was his failing. In the excess of his gallantry he "set up" the oysters whenever their delicate appetites demanded them, and, in settling for

The thing was growing very monotonous, and K. B. remonstrated with his partner, who promised to restrict his liberality. One evening, after a good run of custom, Brown was pensively stirring the contents of the kettle and reckening up the receipts, when a party came in and ranged up to the counter.

There were three high-toned sports, four ladies of the Bret Harte type and Smith. K. B., supposing some of the

And was treating on the strength of it, deftly arranged eight plates of stews in front of the crowd. It was a fearful draft on the contents of the kettle, but eight dollars cash was six dollars profit, thought Brown, as he passed the pickles to a lady, and blandly asked Smith if he Epstein, trustee. Epstein, trustee. Epstein, trustee. Epstein, trustee. would have a little pepper sauce in his. Wine was called for and procured at the bar, the stand being responsible for it, and the bar-keeper said Arkansas Dick "must have struck the right card." Brown did not know, but rushed back with the wine, which soon followed the oysters, and the repast was over. The Erisher, trustee. guests slowly filed out, the rear brought up by Smith, who remarked to his part-

"THEM'S MINE, BROWN."

It was too much. Overcome with rage, Brown seized an ax, and with one fell blow demolished the brass kettle, scattering the stew in all directions, and shouting, "That's mine!" Another scattering the stew in all directions, and shouting, "That's mine!" Another aweep of the ax, and the soup plates were a total wreck. "Them's mine!" Once more the ax descended, and the counter was kindling wood. "That's mine!" rung out on the air, and as Smith reached the door the ax, propelled by his partner's vigorous arm, shaved off his left ear, in which lingered the cry of "D—n your heart, that is mine, too!" That is what bursted up the oyster stand on Park's Ber ter stand on Park's Bar.

A blowpipe has been invented which carries its own fire in itself. At the end of the air tube is a chamber into which coals are placed. Through this the air is forced, and the flame ejected from the oppesite side through the proper nozzles is directed as the operator desires. A most intense heat may be produced, and, most intense heat may be produced, and, by an ingenious arrangement of a double or multiple nozzles, the object to be reduced or heated may be attacked on several sides at the same time. So far this invention has only been applied to the heating of heavy bars of metal, which need to be bent in situ, or to the expansion of wheel tires, etc. But with some alteration the device may be practically and advantageously modified to work in the laboratory and assay-room.

Charcoal has been discovered to be a sure cure for burns. By laying a small piece of charcoal upon the burn the pain aubsides immediately. By leaving the charcoal on one hour, the wound is charcoal on one hour, the wound is healed, as has been demonstrated on E Jd elta Marina, trustee 2120 E Jd elta Marina, trustee 2120 Lewis Mermond.
